

Coping with loss.

The loss of a friend, family member, or co-worker can be very difficult. You may be feeling overwhelmed by feelings of sadness, or wondering how you can help the people most affected.

Talking to a counselor can help you get through this very difficult time. Call anytime, for caring, confidential support and help on a wide range of concerns, including how to:

Understand the process of grieving.

Find ways to support your friends, family and co-workers.

Handle your own feelings of grief, anger or anxiety.

Locate support groups and other resources in your community.
